PERIODISATION:	GEOGRAPHIC SITUATION:
Recuay and Late Recuay: A.D. 200-700.	Near Cabana. PALLASCA.
DESCRIPTION:
15ha, 3150 m.a.s.l. Pashash was probably the seat of a major regional polity centred in Cabana but extending into neighbouring areas of the Tablachaca valley. The site is situated on a ridge top with funerary and residential purpose and is characterised by perimeter walls and enclosures. The burial complex La Capilla on the hilltop contains a tomb of a Recuay noble. Pashash is the only region in Ancash with a considerable amount of site names with Culle roots. Many stone sculptures were found in the village of Cabana, which most likely came from the site.

DESCRIPTION:
More than 30 ha, at 4150 m.a.s.l. The seat of a major Recuay polity, on a ridge top. Emphasis was placed on defence. Yayno had three major residential forms: a) terrace room complexes, b) circular compounds and c) quadrangular compounds. No tombs or burials were found. The large compounds served residential purposes of wealthy Recuay groups. On the summit the torreón, a circular building with concentric walls and curved interior rooms, was situated. The access to the open plaza was restricted. The main entrance was through a staircase. No stone sculptures were found. In the circular precinct to the northeast of the torreón, a tomb was encountered with the cranium of probably a woman, as tupus, collars and adornments of turquoise and metal were found.

DESCRIPTION:
3100 m.a.s.l. Prominent satellite community of 2 ha with funerary purpose, but without defensive features. A ridge top settlement with rectangular constructions and patios. In the centre of one of the patios a monolith can be found. The patios could have had social or socio-political functions. The patio with the monolith, however, had a ceremonial purpose. To the north one can find an above-ground tomb, while to the south a subterranean tomb with two chambers and a niche was encountered. To the west is a precinct with a platform which was kept clean, probably for ceremonial rituals. Kaolinite ceramics and Huaraz-type stone sculptures were found.
