Consumption discourses as positioning strategies for international migrants

Julie Emontspool

Solvay Brussels School of Economics and Management
Université Libre de Bruxelles
Année académique 2011-2012

Directeur : Christian Bluemelhuber
Membres du jury : Marjorie Gassner, Michel Verstraeten, Francois Lambotte, Manuel Hensmans, Dannie Kjeldgaard

Dissertation présentée en vue de l'obtention du grade de Docteur en Sciences de Gestion
Décembre 2011
Overview of the thesis

OVERVIEW OF THE THESIS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

LIST OF FIGURES

LIST OF TABLES

ABSTRACT

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 1

CONSUMER CULTURE IN A GLOBAL WORLD

1. Scientific positioning
2. Consumer research at the border of different disciplines
3. Consumption and consumer culture
4. The global context

CHAPTER 2

MIGRANT CONSUMER RESEARCH

1. Identity and community: migrant belonging and consumption
2. Processes: from assimilation to acculturation
3. Three dimensions to investigate

CHAPTER 3

METHODOLOGY
1. The research process
   82
2. Data collection
   84
3. Data preparation
   111
4. Data analysis
   114

CHAPTER 4
   125
1. Diversity in Belgium: a historical approach
   127
2. Brussels – an international city
   130
3. The migration process
   135

CHAPTER 5
   139
CULTURAL AFFILIATIONS
   139
1. Affiliating to home and host culture – a puzzle missing some pieces
   141
2. The missing pieces: multiplicity of cultures
   146
3. Long-term temporariness of stay
   158
4. Integrating multiple cultural affiliations in mobility
   162

CHAPTER 6
   169
MIGRANT NETWORKS
   169
1. Migrants in between communities
   171
2. The international community
   182
3. Consumption implications of multiple communities
   195

CHAPTER 7
   201
SEGMENTED CONSUMER ACCULTURATION
   201
1. Changes in consumer cultural environments
   203
2. Diversifying consumer cultural environments
   209
3. Segmented consumer acculturation 212

CHAPTER 8 219

TOWARDS A NEW TYPOLOGY OF MIGRANT CONSUMPTION DISCOURSES 219

1. Summary of the three previous chapters 221
2. Typology 222
3. Migrant consumer adaptation 238

CHAPTER 9 241

DISCUSSION 241

1. The victimisation of migrants 243
2. Regaining agency 245
3. Outlooks and nuances 252

CONCLUSION 257

REFERENCES 267

APPENDIX I
Table of Contents

OVERVIEW OF THE THESIS ........................................ III

TABLE OF CONTENTS ........................................ VII

LIST OF FIGURES ............................................... XI

LIST OF TABLES ................................................ XII

ABSTRACT ....................................................... XIII

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS ........................................ XVII

INTRODUCTION ................................................. 1

CHAPTER 1 ...................................................... 17

CONSUMER CULTURE IN A GLOBAL WORLD ............... 17

1. Scientific positioning ........................................ 19

2. Consumer research at the border of different disciplines 20

3. Consumption and consumer culture ........................ 22

4. The global context .......................................... 26
   4.1. Defining globalisation .................................. 26
   4.1.1. Uniformity and difference ......................... 28
   4.1.2. Relations between time and space ............... 31
   4.1.3. Structures of analysis .............................. 32
   4.2. Globalised lives ........................................ 35
   4.2.1. Impact on social relations ......................... 35
   4.2.2. Impact on consumption behaviour ............... 36

CHAPTER 2 ...................................................... 39

MIGRANT CONSUMER RESEARCH ............................. 39

1. Identity and community: migrant belonging and consumption 41
   1.1. Immigrants ............................................. 43
CHAPTER 5

CULTURAL AFFILIATIONS

1. Affiliating to home and host culture – a puzzle missing some pieces
   1.1. Tensions with home country and culture
   1.2. Integrating a new environment

2. The missing pieces: multiplicity of cultures
   2.1. Multiple cultural influences
   2.2. Previous international experience
   2.3. Multiple cultural affiliations
      2.3.1. Cultural affiliations beyond borders
      2.3.2. Neither here nor there: rejecting cultural affiliation
      2.3.3. Detailing cultural affiliations

3. Long-term temporariness of stay

4. Integrating multiple cultural affiliations in mobility
   4.1. Moving from Heimat to Home as global abode
   4.2. The defining elements of belonging

CHAPTER 6

MIGRANT NETWORKS

1. Migrants in between communities
   1.1. Social support in a new environment: the changed role of co-culturals
   1.2. Language and social integration: relations with Belgians

2. The international community
   2.1. Communities in the European context
   2.2. Cultural ambassadors

3. Consumption implications of multiple communities
   3.1. Multiple migrant communities
   3.2. Defining migrant networks

CHAPTER 7

SEGMENTED CONSUMER ACCULTURATION