

Contents

Foreword	1
Introduction	3
Outline of the research	5
Part 1: Presentation of the research	7
0.1 Why study gendered in-work poverty phenomenon?	9
0.1.1 In-work poverty: focus on poverty issue in employment	9
0.1.2 Gendered tendency: poverty is never gender neutral	13
0.1.3 What is missing in research... ..	14
0.2 Research objectives	18
0.3 Research questions	18
0.4 Research significance	19
0.4.1 Working poor: arise from changes in the labour market by a global way	19
0.4.2 Building a de-centralization perspective of in-work poverty	22
0.4.3 Providing broader innovate insights for further in-work poverty research	23
0.4.4 The possibility of comparison between Belgium and China	24
0.5 Research framework, theory and hypotheses	27
0.5.1 Research framework and theory	27
0.5.2 Research hypothesis	28
0.6 Research method	29
Part 2: Contextualization and construction of (gendered) in-work poverty	31
Chapter 1 Contextualization and construction: A brief history of in-work poverty research	33
Introduction	33
1.1 In-work poverty research from 1965 to 2016	35
1.1.1 Initial stage (from 1965 to 1975): What is in-work poverty?	35
1.1.2 Expanding stage (from 1976 to 1990): why does in-work poverty matters?	38
Constructing profiles of in-work poverty	38
Questions-oriented working poor research	40
1.1.3 Deepening stage (from 1991 to 2000): how can we recognize this new poverty issue	42
Two theoretical viewpoints	42

Two dimensions	44
In-work poverty in the international comparison	46
1.1.4 Reconstruction stage (from 2001 to 2010): in-work, why still poor	48
Work is no more enough to avoid poverty.	49
Class, gender and welfare-the need to make the links	51
Working poor rising worldwide	53
1.1.5 Current stage (from 2011 to 2018): what is the relationship between in-work poverty, labour market, and social security	56
Relationships among in-work poverty, labour market, and society	56
Neglected women among the working poor	60
Working poor in China	62
1.2 Key trends in in-work poverty research	63
1.2.1 Trend 1: work is not enough to avoid poverty, what will be working poor getting by if without social security?	67
1.2.2 Trend 2: the lack of attention for the working poor research in developing country	67
1.2.3 Trend 3: the trend of market reconstruction calls for family-target policies and assistance for the informal sector	68
1.2.4 Trend 4: women was usually underrepresented in working poor research in the past.	69
1.2.5 Trend 5: low-income worker is often targeted in research of the working poor	70
1.2.6 Trend 6: the factors to impact in-work poverty and how to affect such social issue have not been yet explored in details.	70
1.3 Contextualizing “working poor” over time and space	71
1.3.1 From a regional phenomenon to a global issue	73
1.3.2 From a single discipline to multi-context analysis	74
1.3.3 From original “male family head” to further calling on respecting individual perspective.	75
1.4 Gendered in-work poverty under individualism and globalization	77
1.4.1 In-work poverty under individualism and globalization world	77
1.4.2 Chinese style individualism	79
1.4.3 Gendered tendency of in-work poverty	81
1.5 Conclusions	83

Chapter 2: Definition and dimensions of “working poor”	85
2.1 The definition and understanding of the “working poor”	85
2.1.1 The common regulations of defining “working poor”	86
2.1.2 In terms of measure: definition in Belgium and in China	91
2.1.2.1 Belgium	91
2.1.2.2 China	93
2.1.3 In terms of interpretation: A conceptual model and a gender dimension	99
A conceptual model of “working poor”	99
A gender dimension of “working poor”	103
2.2 Analytic dimensions of “working poor”	107
2.2.1 Decommodification	107
2.2.2 Defamilialization	108
Chapter 3: A cross-national profile of the female working poor between Belgium and China .	110
3.1 Selecting Belgium & China as comparators	110
3.1.1 Gendered poverty issues in labour markets with a high rate of female participation	110
3.1.2 In-work poverty: An economic and gendered topic	114
3.2 Conditions and characteristics of female in-work poverty in Belgium	117
3.2.1 Mapping the female working poor by Eurostat	117
The standard and scale of female in-work poverty	117
Demographic characteristics	119
Employment characteristics	122
3.2.2 Who are the female working poor in Belgium?	125
3.3 Conditions and characteristics of female in-work poverty in China	125
3.3.1 Mapping the female working poor by CGSS	126
The standard and scale of female in-work poverty	126
Demographic characteristics	129
Employment characteristics	136
3.3.2 Who are the female working poor in China?	144
3.4 The characteristics of female working poor in Belgium and China	146
3.4.1 A cross-national profile of the female working poor	146
3.4.2 The significance of a low-quality job	147

3.4.3 The different focus of female working poor: household or rural	148
Part 3: Comparison of the female working poors	153
Chapter 4 Working poor in decommodification between Belgium and China	155
Introduction	155
4.1 Social security: Belgium & China	160
4.1.1 Belgium social security	160
Stage 1: beginning of Belgium social security	162
Stage 2 (1891-1902): the start of intervention for Belgian government	162
Stage 3(1903-1974): big progress of Belgium social security development	162
Stage 4 (1975-2008): social benefits “cut-down”	163
Stage 5 (2009-): eliminate gender gap in pension reform	163
4.1.2 China social security	164
Stage 1 (1949-1966): founding period of social security – labour insurance in Chinese “unit” phenomenon	167
Stage 2 (1966-1978): plateau and retrogressive period - transition from labour insurance to enterprise insurance.	172
Stage 3 (1979-1991): reform transition from enterprise insurance in planned economy to social insurance in market economy.	173
Stage 4 (1992-2010): the real reform of social security system: social insurance	176
Stage 5 (From 2011 to present): the social security reform in 2010s.....	180
4.2.6 Conclusion	183
4.2 Decommodification in social security system between Belgium and China	189
4.2.1 Pension	190
4.2.1.1 Retirement age and contribution period	194
4.2.1.2 Public pension spending and individual’s sharing	195
4. 2.1.3 Pension coverage	197
4.2.1.4 Pension replacement rate	197
4.2.1.5 Discussion	201
4.2.2 Sickness benefits	203
4.2.2.1 Sickness benefits in Belgium and China.....	203
4.2.2.2 Differentiated decommodification in sickness benefits systems	206

4.2.3 Unemployment	209
4.2.3.1 Unemployment benefits in Belgium and China	209
4.2.3.2 Women's low decommodification in limited unemployment benefits	213
4.2.4 Family benefits	215
4.2.4.1 Family benefits between Belgium and China	215
4.2.4.2 Women, family and fertility in family benefits system	216
4.2.4.3 China's specific family benefits system	219
4.2.5 Working poor in decommodification	221
4.2.5.1 Belgium: Working poor in a universal decommodification	221
4.2.5.2 China: Working poor in a selected decommodification	222
4.2.5.3 View 1: Different social structures, different decommodification processes	228
4.2.5.4 View 2: Two patterns of the selected decommodification to the female working poor ...	235
4.3 Discussion: the relationship between working poor and	242
4. 3.1 Different evolution process of social security	243
4.3.2 Different social security structure	246
4. 3. 3 Different operations of medical insurance	251
4. 3. 4 The proportion of social security expenditure	252
Chapter 5: Defamilialization: care provisions and age-specific gender employment gap in Belgium and China	255
Introduction	255
5.1 The Age-specific gender employment gap and defamilization	256
5.1.1 Age-specific gender employment gap in Belgium and China	256
5.1.2 Women-focused defamilization	260
5.1.3 Gender-focused defamilization typologies	263
5.2 Time distribution of work and family care in Belgium and China	266
5.2.1 Time investment in paid work	266
5.2.2 Time investment in family care	268
5.3 Childcare provision in Belgium and China	270
5.3.1 Formal childcare provision in Belgium	270
5.3.2 Family-oriented childcare provision in China	272
5.3.3 Discussion	274

5.4 Eldercare provision in Belgium and China	277
5.4.1 Formal eldercare in Belgium	277
5.4.2 Family-oriented pattern of eldercare in China	278
5.4.3 Discussion	281
5.5 Gender employment segregation in Belgian and Chinese labour market	283
5.5.1 Occupational gender segregation in Belgium.....	283
5.5.2 Hierarchical Gender segregation in Mainland China	288
5.5.3 The differences and common grounds of women employment in two countries	293
5.5.4 Discussion	303
5.6 Different familization model: Belgium & China	305
5.6.1 Belgium and Mainland China in defamilization typologies	305
5.6.2 Belgium: optional familization model	306
5.6.3 Mainland China: Implicit familization model	308
5.6.4 What is happening to Belgium and China defamilization models?	310
5.6.5 What is behind existing defamilization models?	312
5.7 Discussion 1: gender construction of women employment in the comparative cultural contexts	315
5.8 Discussion 2: Changes, reflection and future direction in family-related policies	318
5.8.1 China: women’s position in collectivism spirits and family-state view	318
5.8.2 Belgium: women’s position in individualization and solidarity spirit	320
Part 4 Discussion and conclusion	323
Chapter 6. Two distinct forms of female working poor in a pluralistic modernity	325
Two distinct forms according to a country’s level of economic development	325
Two distinct types according to a society’s level of pluralistic modernity	326
What can be learned from the Female Working Poor in Belgium and China?	326
6.1 The weight of low-quality jobs on the female working poverty	327
6.1.1 A specific “status group”	327
6.1.2 Low-quality job: the main employment form	329
6.1.3 Gendered employment segregation	330
6.2 The diversity of the female working poor	331
6.2.1 Female working poor in Belgium	332

6. 2.1.1 Single working mothers among Belgium’s female working poor	333
6.2.1.2 Determination of Belgian female working poor situation by institutional and household circumstance	337
6.2.2 Female working poor in China	341
6.2.2.1 The distinction of China’s female working poor to the Belgium’s	341
6.2.2.2 Determination of Chinese female working poor situation by status identification	344
6.2.2.3 Discussion	352
6.3 Fortress besieged from one to another – the case of female working poor in the evolution of Chinese social closure	354
6.3.1 Original social closure.....	356
6.3.1.1 “Land” determined family relationship and women’s status	358
6.3.1.2 Women’s status expanding from rigid hierarchy	361
6. 3.1.3 Status distinction and rule	362
6. 3.1.4 Discussion	365
6.3.2 New social closure	368
6. 3.2.1 China’s female working poor in the stratified social structure	368
6. 3.2.2 Women’s status in Chinese context of equality	370
6. 3.2.3 Equity: a fair sense of equality.....	378
6.3.2.4 Discussion	381
6.4 Conclusion	382
6.4.1 Types of the female working poor	382
6.4.2 From “worker” to “working poor”: A triangulation model of its gender trends	383
6.4.3 What is the place of "working poor" in society?	384
6.4.3.1 A transformation of workfare based on power	385
6.4.3.2 The rising phenomenon of “economically conditioned” status identification in access to the social closure	389
List of tables.....	391
List of figures	394
References	396