

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	v
INFORMATION NOTE	vi
INTRODUCTION	1
CHAPTER 1 - ROBERT GOODNOUGH: THE “INSIDER”	11
1.1. The “insider” as artist
1.2. The pupil’s teachers
1.3. The teacher’s pupil
1.4. The painter’s brush
1.5. The painter’s pictures
CHAPTER 2 - THE ANTECEDENTS	67
2.1. The setting
2.2. 1913: the turning point
2.3. 1919: the standstill
2.4. 1929: the upheaval
2.5. 1939: prelude to war
2.6. 1940: Surrealism invades New York
2.7. 1945: New York takes over!
2.8. 1946: “the spatter-and-daub school of painting” ¹
2.9. 1947: a vintage year for “advanced” American art
2.10. 1948: breaking barriers
2.11. 1949: “The Intrasubjectives”
CHAPTER 3 – “DISTINCTIVE AMERICANISM”	107
3.1. Four “views”
3.2. Cahill’s insight
3.3. Kootz’s predictions
3.4. Janis’s perception
3.5. Barr’s knowledge
3.6. What is the state of American art?
CHAPTER 4 - AN EMBLEMATIC MOMENT	129
4.1. Champions of the American avant-garde
4.2. Clement Greenberg: the critic’s chronicle
4.3. Hofmann’s enduring influence
4.4. Harold Rosenberg: the theoretician of art history
4.5. 1950: a new status for American art
CHAPTER 5 - THE “MAGNIFICENT SEVEN”	174
5.1. Goodnough’s choice
5.2. The activists: Rothko, Gottlieb, and Newman
5.3. The outsider: William Baziotes

¹ Robert M. Coates, The Art Galleries: At Home and Abroad. (The New Yorker, 30 March 1946), 75.

5.4. The intellectual: Robert Motherwell
5.5. The loner: Jackson Pollock
5.6. The maverick: Willem de Kooning
CHAPTER 6 - THE “SUBJECT MATTER OF THE ARTIST”	240
6.1. John Graham: the mentor’s view
6.2. The painters' point of view
CHAPTER 7- GOODNOUGH’S “HYPOTHESIS”	283
7.1. Introduction
7.2. The dissertation
7.3. Goodnough’s “hypothesis”
7.4. The interviews
7.5. Conclusions
CHAPTER 8 - THE DEBATE	313
8.1. The “Artists’ Sessions of Studio 35 (1950)”
8.2. “The Western Round Table”
8.3. “The Club”
CHAPTER 9 - THE “INSIDER” AS WRITER	362
9.1. The “reviewer’s” pen
9.2. The start of things: summer of 1950
9.3. In the thick of it: 1951-1952
9.4. The end of it: 1953-1954
9.5. The “insider’s” eye
CHAPTER 10 - CONCLUSIONS AND EPILOGUE	421
10.1. American subject matter
10.2. Subject matter as an issue
10.3. The “subject matter of the ‘intrasubjective’ artist”
10.4. Goodnough’s “hypothesis”
10.5. What of Abstract Expressionism?
10.6. Goodnough’s insight
10.7. Epilogue
AFTERWORD	438
BIBLIOGRAPHY	443
ILLUSTRATIONS	466
APPENDIXES	497
Appendix 1
Appendix 2
Appendix 3	