

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	10
Chapter 1 : Creating new conception of “work ethic” and motivation for a changing economy, particularly on reformulating “self-appraisal” issue	25
Chapter 2 : Implementation of “ work ethic ”, Rawls’ “rational plan”, Gandhi’s “rational plan” and Universal Basic Income (UBI)	57
Chapter 3 : Reformulating desert/merit/legitimate expectations with my “ work ethic ” for equality/distributive justice	98
Chapter 4 : Reformulating incentives and Nozick’s arguments with my equality/distributive justice	127
Chapter 5 : Reformulating “expensive tastes”, global or national “ work ethic ” by reformulating “effective altruism” and global justice	160
Chapter 6 : Reformulating “expensive tastes”, “luck egalitarianism” and “responsibility”, particularly with Dworkin, Cohen, Anderson’s research, for equality/distributive justice and anticipated responses in earlier chapters	182
Chapter 7 : Gandhi’s ethic/humility, utility and warnings	209
Conclusion	246
Bibliography	252

Detailed table of contents

Introduction 10

I. First chapter

Creating new conception of “work ethic” and motivation for a changing economy, particularly on “self-appraisal” issue 25

-

1. Economical data on how my “work ethic” Self esteem (SE) or self respect (SR) or self recognition (S rec) or Self Appraisal (SA) is relevant, particularly in the changes in the twenty-first century 26
2. Resolving the contradictions in Rawls’ thesis with “work ethic” to create more substantive distributive justice 28
3. More details on Gandhi's “work ethic” and self respect 36
4. Justification for “work ethic” and motivation/feasibility 45
 - a. Ideal conception 45
 - b. Intuitive ethics 46
 - c. “Overlapping consensus” or “Kantian contractarianism” from Rawls and Stuart White’s exploitation thesis, Van Parijs’ incidental question on “what is work?” for “work ethic” 48
6. Other scholars that have dealt with SE/SA/SR/SRec.
 - v. Gandhi's work ethic 54

II. Second chapter

Implementation of “work ethic”, Rawls’ “rational plan”, 57

Gandhi’s “rational plan” and Universal Basic Income (UBI)

1. Introduction 57
2. “Unconditional Basic Income” (UBI), its variants and contradictions: “work ethic” can be a solution 59
3. Reformulating Rawls’ “rational plan” with Gandhi’s humility and “work ethic” for implementation 72
4. Implementation of work ethic/rational plans with nudging individuals 83

5. Conclusion	97
---------------	----

III. Third Chapter

Reformulating desert/merit/legitimate expectations with my “work ethic”	98
1. Introduction	98
2. Analysing the existing debates and literature of distributive justice in desert/ legitimate expectations/merit/rewards	100
a. Scanlon’s arguments	103
a1. Institutional desert	103
a2. Non-Institutional desert	105
b. “integral luck” and “circumstantial luck” argument in desert in distributive justice and the issue of burden and desert	108
c. Sher’s argument on “effort and control, burden of work, and the argument of ‘enjoying your job’”	112
d. Desert, effort, natural/neurological abilities, Rawls’ thesis and empirical data	116
e. Practical implementation with my conception and possible complications	118
f. infeasibility in effort and contribution, holistic and individual desert	119
g. the unintended cause of my thesis and desert or fear of discrimination, nepotism and favouritism	121
h. demand and supply with economist factors	122
i. The aspect of education and Olsaretti’s similar proposal	123
j. The difficulty in the definition of desert itself	124
3. Conclusion	126

IV. Fourth chapter 127

Reformulating incentives and Nozick’s arguments with my “work ethic” for equality/distributive justice
1. Introduction	127
2. Reformulating incentives in the twenty first century for distributive justice	127

2.a.Cohen’s burden exception, “positional goods” and my argument	130
2.b.Frye’s argument	136
2.c.Individual or institutional desert	136
2.d. Social psychology or philosophy	139
2.e.Van Parijs’ criticism	140
2.f Change of career and incentives	141
2g Onerous requirements while institutional prescriptions are clear	143
2h Cognisant of “genuine value” of product	143
3. Nozick’s argument	145
4. Conclusion	158

V. Fifth chapter 160

Reformulating “expensive tastes”, global or national “work ethic” by reformulating “effective altruism” and global justice

1.Introduction	160
2. Introduction of Singer’s ethics and its relevance	163
3. Meta ethics and modifying Singer’s ethics while agreeing with the premise of donating substantial part of personal income to underdeveloped countries. Some of Singer’s secondary empirical data can bolster Rawls’, Cohen’s and my thesis’ research.	164
4. Defending Singer’s thesis with my work ethic	171
5 Conclusion	181

VI. Sixth Chapter 182

Reformulating “expensive tastes”, “luck egalitarianism” and “responsibility”, particularly with Dworkin, Cohen, Anderson’s research, for equality/distributive justice and anticipated responses in earlier chapters

1. Introduction	182
2. Dworkin and Cohen's arguments on “expensive tastes” and the Problematic notion of “responsibility” and luck egalitarianism in distributive justice	183
3. My conception has some similarities with Stoic philosophy but some aspects of Stoic philosophy can be contrary to my stated goal on aiding the least advantaged	197
4.A possible response to my ethics can be that it can actually be counterproductive	198

to my ultimate goal, especially on the aspect of self esteem/respect by using Doppelt's thesis

5.I analysed limited perfectionism in this thesis though perfectionism can be with aspirational or edificatory perfectionism, which one of them fits with my conception and the thesis. 202

Conclusion 208

VII. Seventh Chapter 209

Gandhi's ethic/humility, utility and warnings

Introduction 211

Defining Gandhi's humility/work ethic 219

Warnings with Ralph Ellison's analysis 243

Implementation

Conclusion 245

VIII. Conclusion 246

Bibliography 252